Outcomes of the 3rd DICAMP-Workshop

During the course of the 3rd DICAMP Workshop in Tunis lecturers, organizational staff and the first students of the master programme got together to discuss the upcoming curriculum as well as other matters around the DICAMP project. We were delighted to see most of our Tunisian and European partners on September 3rd at ENIT for the first meeting with the enthusiastic and highly motivated students of the master programme. Besides an introduction of the teaching team, the students received organizational information about staying abroad at a European institution, student life in Europe as well as the use of the DICAMP website. The meetings on September 4th and 5th took place at IHEC and mainly focused on the curriculum and the next steps towards the accreditation of the master programme. European and Tunisian lecturers worked together on their modules, discussed and defined the content as well as planned the schedule and prepared the relevant documents for the accreditation institute. Additionally the implementation of the intensive Business English course for the students was discussed together with the British Council in Tunis which will be in charge for the teaching of this course.

As all participants were highly motivated most of our goals were accomplished and the workshop was an important stepstone to intensify the relationship between the Tunisian, French, British and German partners.

University of Exeter

Business has been one of the cornerstones of the University of Exeter since it was founded. 1997 saw the School of Business and Economics at the University of Exeter emerge as an international Business School and in 2008 the School was renamed simply the Business School. The school has grown year on year, both in size and stature - building our international reputation in teaching and research, and attracting some of the world's leading business minds to teach the courses. Today, it offers a wide range of business programs for undergraduate, postgraduate and executive students and clients from all over the world. With students from 82 countries, and staff from 18, UNEXE provides a truly international business school experience. The courses are informed by some of the very latest thinking in business research. UNEXE provides outstanding facilities and resources in what is said to be one of the UK's most attractive campus environments.
