DAAD conference in Tunis: DICAMP as an example of international education cooperation

Within a German-Tunisian networking conference organized by the German Academic Exchange Service DAAD, Dr. Anna Trifilova presented our DICAMP project. The conference was held in Tunis from the 3rd to the 5th of December 2013 and was dedicated to educational cooperation between Tunisia and Germany. Amongst the numerous guests, were e.g. the German ambassador Jens Plötner, the Tunisian minister for higher education Prof. Dr. Ben Salem, the director of the DAAD office in Tunisia Beate Schindler-Kovats as well as numerous scholars from Tunisian and German universities and institutions. As an exemplary case of education cooperation, DICAMP attracted much interest amongst the audience. While networking with other participants of the event Dr. Anna Trifilova was able to promote successfully our Innovation Management master programme.

Project Activities

Workshop in Paris

Tunisian and European partners met from December 18 – 20 in Paris for the third project workshop. Besides correcting and revising the accreditation report partners especially focused on the working packages of 2014 and the collection as well as discussion of the first ideas for the final DICAMP event which will take place for one week in September 2014. The official graduation ceremony of the first cohort of DICAMP students and another industry event will be one major event within this final event. In Paris DICAMP partners also fixed the last organizational and thematic issues regarding the master theses of DICAMP students which will be written from February 15 – May 15. We keep you updated about topics of master theses and the student's stay at the European partner institutions in our newsletters and on our website.

Master Programme

Accreditation Documents on their way to a final draft

After the DAAD event Dr. Anna Trifilova met again with the Tunisian partners involved in the accreditation process to work further on the accreditation report. Therefore the process has been pushed further. Especially the following topics were discussed and finalized for the report: objective of the programme, learning outcomes of the programme, learning objectives and outcomes of the modules. The next step is to finalize the draft within the next weeks in order to submit it to ASIIN.
